Strait Is The Gate La

Strait is the Gate is a 1909 French novel written by André Gide. It was translated into English by Dorothy Bussy. It probes the complexities and terrors of adolescence and growing up. Based on a Freudian interpretation, the story uses the influences of childhood experience and the misunderstandings that can arise between two people. Strait is the Gate taps the unassuaged memory of Gide's unsuccessful wooing of his cousin between 1888 and 1891. Much of the story is written as an epistolary novel

STRAIT IS THE GATE (La Porte étroite)by André Gide, 1909. In The Immoralist (L'Immoraliste) André Gide had tentatively explored the moral consequences of a particular type of self-centered and, by innuendo, atheistic hedonism. By implication Gide's text had rejected it. Strait Is the Gate (La Porte étroite) explores and rejects the opposite possibility—that the summit of human achievement lies in the renunciation of all earthly joys.
